EX-GOV. ROBINSON SUMS UP. "May it please Your Honors, Mr. Foreman and Gentlemen: One of the mest dastardly and diabolical crimes ever committed in Massachusetts was perpetrated in August, 1882, in Fall liver. The enormity of it startled everybody, every man feels that the wrong snould be righted and the wicked brought to justice.

"Insrection showed Mrs. Borden had been siain by the use of some sharp instrument, and below stairs was Mr. Ikprien's mutilated body. The terrors of those scenes no language can portically, and we are challenged at the outset to find who was equal to that enortically, whose whole heart is blackened with crime. A maniac, not a man of some and heart, a lunatic, a devil. They were well directed blows which insed those deaths, not directed by a blinderer, none going amiss. Surely we can say at the outset this was not the careicas, untrained doing of one unfamiliar with such work. mest dastardly and diabolical crimes

"The Government raid: 'If we can't prove it against her she shall go free,' but it was one-sided and you are to draw no inference whatever from those proceedings of the preliminary hearing.

"We come here to seek freedom and right through you, gentlemen. As you begin to contemplate this crime you must say such acts are physically and morally impossible for this young woman. It is a wreck of human morals to say this of her.

NO COMPLAINT OF PERSECUTION. NO COMPLAINT OF PERSECUTION.

"The defense complains of no persecution on the part of the District-Attorney. He has only one duty to do, and with his well-carred fame at the bar he has no need to search for fame and he will be the last man to attempt such. He stands above such things and says, 'All I have is the case as it is, and it was brought to me by the police of Fall River.' He isn't here for blood, neither is he helped for that purpose by our friend from Essex County. So you see no small play, no mean tactics on the part of the commonwealth, only a presentation of what has been proved here and only that."

After entering upon a chronological stry of the tragedy, the ex-Governor said:

"There is absolutely no direct evidence against her. Nobody saw, heard or experienced anything to connect her with the tragedy. No knowledge or use of any instrument has been shown, and it is not shown that she ever touched one, knew of one or bought one.

"And the murders told no tale through her. Not a spot on her, from her dress to her hair. Yes, there was, one, on the white skirt, one as big as the head of a pin, and that was on the back of her skirt, although the Government may say she turned the skirt around before she commenced. But nobody claims now that the little speck tells any tale.

"Then there was some talk about a roll of burned paper that was found by Mr. Harrington, and there were some dark insinuations floating around that Dr. Bowen knew something about it.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 19.—The day of the arguments in the Borden case brought out a terrific jam at the court-deep standing over the woman on the longs.

"Now you are to conceive of the murderer standing over the woman on the floor, and you are to consider how Mr. Borden was slain. Now, what reason is there to consider this defendant guilty? What right have they to say she is? Well, first they say she was in the house. Well, that may be the wrong place for her to be because it is her own home; perhaps it might be better for her to be travelling the streets, but I don't think so.

"She was in her room when they say Mrs. Borden's body was lying on the floor, and that she must have seen the body. But you have been shown that you can't stand on that landing and look into the guest chamber. And then they say that when she went downstairs she could have seen the body, and therefore ought to have seen it. But people don't go about their own houses playing the detective, and if she had done that thing he Commonwealth would have said she knew of it and was the murderer.

The testimony of three men was cited to prove that Rubinsky saw the defendant coming to the house from the barn, and, therefore, her statement of her whereabouts at the time of the murders was true.

THE LAUGH ON THE STAIRS.

and, therefore, her statement of her whereabouts at the time of the murders was true.

THE LAUGH ON THE STAIRS.
When Lizzie spoke about going upstairs for Mrs. Borden, she meant the front stairs, because all knew she could not be up the back stairs, as a sheet had been obtained from there. Lizzie's laughter on the stairs was immaterial unless guilt was assumed. She did not know there was a dead body in that chamber.

"If you are downstairs in your own house and some one cracks a joke you laugh at it. But suppose your son drops dead in a room upstairs? Then yu, wh d nt knw he is dead, are a hard-hearted wretch because yu laughed at the joke."

Accused of Wrecking the Cassell Bookmaker Hart's Story of Outrage by Policemen.

As President He Issued $186,000 A Party of Bluecoats Take Turns in Beating Him.

Frank R. Hart, a bookmaker, of 454 East Eighty-fourth street, and Frank Osborne, who lives at 213 in the same street, were prisoners this morning in the Harlem Police Court.

Both men were badly used up, particu-larly Hart, who looked as if he had gone through a threshing machine. His head, face and neck were cut and bruised in such a shocking manner that not ever half a dozen yards of bandages were abl to hide the wounds.

Disorderly conduct was the charge which Policeman Isaac Milhauser, of the East Eighty-eighth street station, preferred against them, and he had half a dozen brother officers in court or within the immediate vicinity, ready to corroborate him.

got through, put a different complexion on the story. They showed that Hart was clubbed, kicked, knocked down and beaten by several officers, apparently for no particular reason save to satisfy an old grudge. Osborne was introduced to the billy for threatening to appear in court as a witness for his friend.

According to Hart's story, his trouble with the police dates back two years age, when he was arrested while sitting on his own stoop by Milhauser. He was discharged the next morning, and ever since, he says, he has been hounded by the entire force in that section.

He was perfectly sober shortly before last midnight, he said, when, accompanied by Osborne, he entered Grim-m's restaurant, at Seventy-ninth street and Third avenue, where they had something to eat. Afterwards they went out and walked over to Carrel's liquor store at Eighty-first and Third avenue, to have a drink.

In the saloon, he said, they found Policeman Hannan, of the East Eighty-eighth street station, in full uniform. Policeman Finn, of the same precinct, was also there in citizen's clothes, as was ex-Policeman, Gally, two district watchmen and John Hicks, a hig, strapping fellow who works about the place.

"Finn asked us to have a drink," got through, put a different complexion

"You are a witness to this, Osborne," Hart cried to his friend. "Be in court this morning."

When Osborne said he would be on hand, he was clubbed also. Both men were then taken to the station-house, and while answering the sergeant's questions, Milhauser took a box of clear-tees, as alleged, from Hart's pockets, and, breaking them up, threw them on the floor.

When arraigning their prisoners in court this morning, both policemen insisted that they did not know Hart, and had never met him until the time of the trouble.

Their version of the affair was that Hart had beaten the man Hicks and, on arresting him, Osborne interfered and was also brought along. Unfortunately for their story Hicks happened to be in court, and he did not have as much as a scratch on him. Besides he was about as big a man as Hart.

"I am satisfied that you would hang this man if you possibly could," Justice Burke said to the officers, and then he administered a severe lecture.

He discharged the two prisoners with the advice that they at once prefer charges against the men. Hart left the court-room promising to go to Police Headquarters at once. He says he will nover rest until he obtains satisfaction.

"Finn asked us to have a drink." Hart continued, addressing the Court, "and I told him I never drank with policemen. That seemed to annoy them iall, and I saw Finn go over and talk earnestly with Hicks.

"Soon after Hicks asked me to have a drink," and when I refused, he struck me in the face and knocked me down. When I got up the proprietor of the saloon, who happened to be there, said that if we wanted to fight, we had better go outside."

All adjurned to the sidewalk, but as that was on Hannan's beat he said there should be no fighting, and that if the men wanted to have it out, they had better go to the park, and all started in that direction.

On the way Hicks said he did not care about fighting Hart, and after some little wrangling the party turned back. Hart said that when they reached the corner of Lexington avenue and Eighty second street Hick's started to strike him again, and he struck back.
